Thanks for your interest in BRI @ Saint Louis University School of Medicine.

Now that you know we're here ... what's next?

Greetings!

October 15, 2015

Thank you for finding out about Benjamin Rush Institute and meeting the BRI-Saint Louis University School of Medicine student leaders at the recent movie screening or lecture event. We're excited to get to know you! Since joining us officially last year, BRI-SLU student leaders have consistently been top contributors in events, articles, and engagement.

We hope you will also continue to participate with us during the 2015-2016 academic year.

We've added your name and email address to our newsletter database because you signed up on an interest form at a BRI-SLU event. We send out 2 - 4 email newsletters monthly to our general membership, plus a few more exclusively to our student leader body. We hope that you'll be interested in the various timely topics we cover, and you can unsubscribe any time.

Why be part of BRI?

Becoming a BRI student member is easy and opens doors to certain benefits:

- Networking with other like-minded students, professors, speakers, doctors and healthcare professionals
- The chance to attend coveted healthcare policy conferences on exclusive BRI student scholarships
- Letters of recommendation & support when applying to selective internships at highly regarded national think tanks and policy institutes
- The option to contribute and be recognized for white papers and blog posts highlighted on BRI's website and in social media
- Personal development through organizing events with your chapter team, interacting

- with nationally renowned speakers, doctors and healthcare professionals
- Unique BRI lapel pin to show your support
- BRI Chapter Officers: First consideration to attend the annual BRI-Leadership Conference, held in a major US city in the spring

For about $2 a month, it's easy to become a BRI Student Member.

Attending BRI events and being involved with your campus BRI Chapter does not require membership, but is encouraged. Memberships run August-to-August to streamline bookkeeping and to coincide with academic calendars. We welcome your participation. All new memberships will be valid through August, 2016.
